A STORY FROM OUR SHELTER

Becca is in shelter with us, she has three children in elementary school. Becca’s oldest child does not qualify for transportation from the school district because the school is less than two miles from our shelter and the child is seen as old enough to walk. However, Becca does not feel safe allowing the child to walk alone because of the family violence they are currently experiencing. For this reason she makes the walk -- 1.9 miles -- twice daily with her older child and coordinates this with the pick-up/drop off schedules for her two other children. The total walking trips to bus stops and schools takes about 75 minutes each morning and afternoon.

This leaves Becca only a few hours a day to work on the things she hopes to accomplish while in shelter such as, finding permanent housing, connecting with legal support, getting to doctor’s appointments etc.

2017 Services

In 2017, SPAN provided assistance to nearly 2,000 adults and children impacted by domestic violence. Every survivor, every story, touches us. Our support to these survivors was only possible because of the caring and generous community of Boulder.

Director’s Desk

Dear Friends,

#MeToo #TimesUp, Rob Porter, Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School... and the list goes on. People, places, and movements inspired by hashtag declarations have become collective placeholders for the prevalence of sexual harassment and abuse, the minimization of domestic violence, and the horrific devastation of gun violence in schools. The volume can be overwhelming, even numbing.

It is also inspirational. When the voices of those who have endured terror, whether by a once beloved partner or a deranged classmate with a grudge and a gun, begin to demand accountability and change, then our choice as a community becomes clearer. We can retreat to helplessness (“nothing can be done; the problem is too big, too complicated”). Or, we can listen, learn, and struggle together for solutions to the many ways that violence, abuse, and dehumanization permeate our relationships and communities.

Now is the time for all of us – survivors and students, advocates and activists, parents and politicians - to seize this movement of possibility and change. SPAN’s work has always been about the lofty goal of ending abuse. Let’s work together to make it happen.

Nearly 2,000 adults and children turned to SPAN for safety and support last year alone. Whether through SPAN’s Lawyers for Victims Project which provides survivors with attorneys to represent them in Permanent Protection Orders hearings, our Housing Stability for Survivors Project that offers rental assistance and housing support as survivors rebuild their lives after violence, or our other core shelter, advocacy, counseling and education programs, lives were changed. All of this was possible only because of the generosity and involvement of you, our community of supporters.

Join us in 2018 as we keep the voices of survivors central to our efforts to end domestic violence and work for peaceful families and a just community. Together, we make change possible.

Peace,
Anne Tapp, Executive Director

Peers Building Justice

We asked our P.B.J. youth how they felt about gun violence. Their responses may shock you. “It seems that every time we talk, every time we push for change, every time politicians start agreeing to pay attention to this issue, it’s already too late.”

DO YOU FEEL INSPIRED BY THE MOVEMENT THE PARKLAND SURVIVORS HAVE STARTED REGARDING GUN CONTROL?

I feel extremely inspired and hopeful by the Never Again movement that the Parkland survivors have started. I find it motivating to see how a few high school students have started a nationwide movement that has created change even in our current political climate. The Parkland survivors have inspired me significantly. I am very impressed by how they were able to take social media and use it as an outlet to create a non-partisan movement demanding to enforce gun control policy. I have a lot of confidence in my generation with all of the political action and participation I have seen and will continue to see. This movement is also very important in revolutionizing the way that politicians see students, making them recognize teen activists as political leaders that need to be taken seriously.

DO YOU BELIEVE YOUR SCHOOL, COMMUNITY AND LOCAL POLITICIANS ARE DOING WHAT IS NEEDED TO ADDRESS GUN VIOLENCE?

Generally, no, I don’t believe any institutions or us as a community, are doing enough to end gun violence and pass tighter gun legislation. When the Parkland shooting happened, I genuinely heard nothing about it all day. None of my teachers or administration said anything regarding it. I understand it’s scary to talk about these things, especially being students and teachers. Students and teachers are two groups who spend most of our days in school, and are obviously common targets, but any change has to start with talk. It seems that every time we talk, every time we push for change, every time politicians start agreeing to pay attention to this issue, it’s already too late. We have to be making this change, passing stricter gun legislation, now, before we stop talking and another shooting occurs.

DO YOU BELIEVE THE NATIONAL SCHOOL WALKOUTS AND THE MARCH FOR OUR LIVES RALLIES WILL IMPACT/LEAD TO CHANGE?

I do believe that the National School Walkouts and the March for Our Lives will lead to change because they’re strong events that can send a message to the government. If the government truly cares about public opinion, they will see the amount of support shown in our movement and will propose a solution. Also, all these movements will impact the consideration for new legislation because all these protests will get a lot of attention bringing in more support from others. Although, this movement will need a lot of contribution with a lot of hard work, I believe we are a strong community of students that can come together to raise our voice over something we support.

SPAN’s Emergency Shelter provided 9,273 night stays to 285 adults and 67 children in 2017. Survivors and their children can stay up to six weeks.

718 adults and children received individual and group counseling services from SPAN. Trauma counseling services are available in English and Spanish, and are located in Boulder, Lafayette and Broomfield.

506 survivors of violence sought support from SPAN as they dealt with the legal system and/or law enforcement as a result of the abuse. SPAN’s Advocacy Program provided support around civil, criminal and immigration issues.

278 survivors and their children participated in SPAN’s Transitional Services Program last year, a 28% increase over the previous year. Access to affordable housing, long term support, case management and resource facilitation is critical for survivors as they become stable and self sufficient, particularly in Boulder’s high priced housing market.

When His Holiness The Dalai Lama visited CU Boulder in the spring of 2016, thousands of people flocked to hear him speak and the event raised more than $80,000. The Dalai Lama does not keep the money generated by his appearances, and SPAN was very proud to be one of the local non-profits chosen by The Tibetan Association of Colorado to receive a portion of the proceeds. SPAN received more than $21,000 thanks to this generous gesture.

SPAN needs at least 25% of its annual revenues to come from community based support. This includes donations from individuals, local businesses, faith based organizations and proceeds from our fundraising events. In 2016 we fell just short of that goal, with 23% of 2016 revenues coming from community based support. We are so grateful to everyone who donates to SPAN -- last year 684 people made donations in amounts from $5 to $10,000. Every donation matters, we are all in this together!

SPAN 2016 ANNUAL REPORT

2016 HIGHLIGHTS

Through the fall of 2016 SPAN held the Hear Our Voices Art Project & Exhibit. Working with the Naropa Community Art Studio, art-therapy graduate students from Naropa, and SPAN staff and volunteers, a group of domestic violence survivors came together for a six-week art workshop. Adults and children attended weekly workshops at the Naropa East Campus, where they created works of art and community. SPAN also chose eight works of art from community members for the Hear Our Voices Project. These works were on display in Lafayette during October and were the focus of the HearOurVoices event on October 27 at Twisted Pine Brewery in Boulder. The artwork was intended to share perspectives on the experience of intimate partner violence, the impact on the community and the individual, offering survivors a unique opportunity to share their stories, for us to hear their voices.

2016 was another great year for SPAN’s summer programming for children and youth, called Camp Kid. SPAN hosted two week-long daycamp sessions for kids ages 6 through 13, as well as organizing a six-week program for middle and high school students in collaboration with The Family Resource Center at the San Juan el Centro housing community in Boulder. More than 50 low income young people from Boulder enjoyed a summer filled with activities, field trips, art and service learning projects.

In 2016 SPAN successfully applied for $72,000 in one-time funding from the U.S. Office for Victims of Crime/Crime Victims Fund (established by the Victims of Crime Act, and thus known as VOCA funds) to make updates to SPAN’s network, security and telecommunications systems. The VOCA funds allowed SPAN to make comprehensive improvements to SPAN’s technology infrastructure, including basics like repairing and replacing network cabling, drops, switches, firewalls and backup power supplies at the Outreach Center and Emergency Shelter. SPAN’s email system was migrated to Outlook 365 and the cloud, eliminating the need for an email server and making email more secure and easier to access and store. SPAN also used project funding to add security cameras to the Outreach Center and update the security systems at both Outreach and the Emergency Shelter.

Throughout the month of October last year the fine folks at Zoe Ma Ma in downtown Boulder asked customers to donate to SPAN, promising to match every dollar donated that month. Zoe Ma Ma’s customers stepped up to the challenge and by month’s end SPAN received a check for $8,866, representing donations from more than 500 people and a generous match from the restaurant.

Other local businesses that supported SPAN with fundraising events in 2016 include McGuckin’s Hardware, Hazel’s Beverage World, Lucky’s Market, Boulder Sundown Saloon, Big Red F and the West End Tavern.
