

Theory of Change

At WomenStrong International, we believe that women and girls are best served by programs in their own communities. Yet, community-based women-led organizations often lack the resources, technical support, networks, and visibility needed to achieve their full potential.

WomenStrong’s mission is to help address these challenges. To create meaningful and sustainable change, we know the importance of working closely with our partners to address issues at their very root, to ensure that women and girls will truly thrive. We believe this work will lead to a world in which all women and girls are free to prosper and to live their lives in dignity and peace.

Community-based women-led organizations are among the best-placed agents to deliver programs that meet the needs of their communities. Partners are addressing some of the most critical needs of women and girls: accessing lifesaving reproductive health care, keeping girls in school, preventing gender-based violence, and creating pathways to economic security and opportunity.

None of this would be possible without the support of our partners, funders, and other stakeholders.